THESE STREETS ARE WATCHING

A film documenting police abuse in three communities. Independent filmmaker Jacob Crawford weaves three cities' responses to police brutality into a single tale of community empowerment and direct action through recording police on the streets. The film includes basic legal concepts that can give people an understanding of their rights when dealing with police. The film is divided into sections that explain basic rights, tactics for documenting police activity and ideas for further action and organizing.

A discussion about taking action here in Atlanta will follow.
